

OUTSOURCING A DREAM PAINTER

TIMO BÖHME DREAMT OF SOMETHING SO SPECTACULAR THAT HE HIRED SOMEONE FROM FREELANCER.COM TO PUT IT ON CANVAS.

"I DIDN'T THINK I COULD FIND A PAINTER SO WILLING TO PAINT MY DREAM. HE UNDERSTOOD WHAT I WANTED FROM THE GET-GO AND EVEN CALLED IT A CHALLENGE TO PAINT EXACTLY WHAT WAS IN MY HEAD."

He could not take the images off his head. They bugged him for days after he woke up in a cold sweat following an emotional and vivid dream. Inspired by the relevance of his cinematic dream on today's fast-paced world, Timo Böhme decided to turn it into a fiction story. He also started drawing the images he could not forget. "There was something different about the dream. It was so clear and the images were very precise in my mind, as if it really happened. I wanted to keep it so I wrote the story and tried to draw the images myself. I wasn't content with the way the pictures turned out, so I decided to find someone who could paint them for me," said Timo.

He then started his search for the painter who would give life to the images. Finding the right person was extremely difficult. Timo knew that there are a lot of talented painters out there, but only very few could imagine his story and be able to put it on canvas. There was also the matter of finances. Considering his budget was only about $150, it would not be enough to hire a painter in Switzerland. If sourced locally, he might have to pay around $400 to $800.

Timo knew he had to outsource the job because it would not only reach a broad audience, but it could cost cheaper too. Finding the best platform was a no-brainer. He was a freelancer from vWorker until it merged with Freelancer.com. "I knew I would have better luck posting it on Freelancer.com because I'm already familiar with how the site works," he said.

Soon after he posted the project, he found two quality workers. He decided to settle for the one who asked a lot of questions. "If the freelancer is inquisitive, I feel like he's going to take the job seriously."

He gave the project a duration of three months but the freelancer managed to perfectly paint his dreams in under a month. "I didn't think I could find a painter so willing to paint my dream. He understood what I wanted from the get-go and even called it a challenge to paint exactly what was in my head. The price is amazing for his time," he shared.
